

Searching our collection:

Our search facility is provided by the Google Programmable Search Engine. It is simple, fast, clean, and while it focuses on the summaries of interviews it covers all of the material found on this web site.

Entering simple text into the box will find every iteration of that word or words. This can give some unwanted returns, but if it does then more control can be applied using one or more of a series of widely used operators which can be applied to any Google search. The most useful of these for searching our site are as follows:

You type:	Example	Result
any word(s)	French	This will find all instances of that word(s) in the entire site
“your search words”	“French tuition”	Adding quote marks will only find instances that exactly match your search words
AND	French AND Spanish	This will only return results related to both words
OR	French OR Spanish	This will return results related to the two words, or both
